WHAT'S THERE: From April 10 to May 10, pick up Cienne's intricately handwoven Indian silk robes and Khokho's Swaziland-produced basket bags (below right, Thembi bucket bag, $570) at Bloomingdale's, which is hosting pop-up shops for Maison de Mode—the luxury ethical fashion website founded by Amanda Hearst and Hassan Pierre—at both of its Manhattan locales and online at Maison de Mode's site.

PAY IT FORWARD: A portion of sales will be donated to Nest, a nonprofit that connects fashion brands seeking traditional craftsmanship with local artisans in countries such as Indonesia and Mexico.
